

GENDER PAY GAP REPORT 2017

As part of our commitment to build an inclusive and diverse business we are committed to fostering an inclusive environment and promoting equal opportunities for all. The Senior Leadership team in the UK has developed a detailed action plan outlining how we will build a more inclusive culture with a key focus on gender balance.

Under UK legislation that came into force in April 2017 we are required to publish data about our gender pay gap. Gender pay gaps relates to differences in average hourly male and female pay and bonuses and does not compare the pay received by men and women, or groups of people, for doing the same or equivalent work, known as equal pay.

OUR RESULTS

QUARTILES

This shows the proportion of males to females in each pay quartile in the Company. All relevant employees are ranked from the lowest rate of pay to the highest, then the list is spilt into four equal sections and the percentage of male and female employees in each quartile is calculated.

Lower pay quartile	Lower middle pay quartile	Upper middle pay quartile	Upper pay quartile
33.3%	14.9%	2.7%	14.9%
66.7%	85.1%	97.3%	85.1%

employees are listed in order of bonus payment.	97.2%

At first glance the difference in gender pay between men and women seems to be significant but overall this illustrates structural effects derived from our integrated business model and of the industry in which we operate rather than any pay inequality.

The main drivers of this gap are as follows:

- The material handling industry in which we operate is a predominantly male environment with entry levels through service and sales engineering routes.
- There are more men than women in management roles as this again reflects the experience that will have been gained in sales and service environments that are predominantly male.
- Linde Sterling Ltd has many back office administration functions that concentrate, in various areas including Finance, Service, Stores, Sales, Hire and HR. Reflecting the national trend, there are more women than men in lower level administration roles where remuneration levels will be lower.
- The figures include sales commission where the recipients are predominately male and management bonuses where the majority of recipients are also male.
- The basic salary figures are net of salary sacrifice contributions for pensions and child care vouchers that affect basic pay.
- There is a slight difference in the percentage of women and men receiving a bonus but the bonus pay gap shows that there are more males receiving higher bonuses than females

OUR COMMITMENT TO CLOSING THE GAP

Attracting talented women into our industry is a challenge but we are committed both to equality and encouraging a diverse workforce. We have developed initiatives which we hope will encourage more females into the industry and initiatives to address the gaps that have been identified.

- The Company has introduced a set of Values and Leadership Principles in a drive to change company culture and has launched a new gender neutral appraisal system based on these values.
- Over recent years we have increased the amount of women managers and we will continue to develop more women managers as part of the succession plan.
- Continue to recruit from a wider range of industries and we have extended the training for new sales and service staff to integrate them into the business in a quicker and more effective manner.
- Continue to monitor the differences in gender pay taking actions where appropriate. Consider initiatives to identify and remove barriers to female advancement. We have created the new position of Talent Development Manager for the whole business to ensure its talent development processes are gender neutral.
- Over the past 18 months 3 female first line managers have received management training to further their development.
- Competency based job descriptions and competency based interviews have been introduced to promote more effective gender neutral recruitment.
- We have reviewed our bonus structures to be gender neutral.

I confirm that the contents of this report are accurate.
